City welcomes industry leaders at sport and leisure seminar

The City of Albany will be hosting an industry seminar this week with support from the Department of Sport and Recreation, the Leisure Institute of Western Australia Aquatics (LIWA), and the Royal Life Saving Society Australia. The 19th Annual one-day seminar, at the Albany Leisure and Aquatic Centre, will welcome aquatic managers from Local Government to share knowledge and information from throughout the regions and aquatic industry.

The City of Albany Deputy Mayor, Greg Stocks will be officially opening the seminar this Wednesday, 21 October at 9am.

“The City acknowledges the tremendous support of our partnering agencies and will be leading a day of learning, sharing and working together to improve long term sustainability and professional development opportunities in regional areas,” said Cr. Stocks.

The Albany Leisure and Aquatic Centre aims to continue to work with industry leaders and welcomes new innovative ideas from guest speakers at the seminar. The event, coordinated by LIWA, is set to bring the latest information to regional centres, offers representation from across the state and neighbouring shires, and will assist the City in providing quality services for community, improved planning and benchmarking.
