JOIN US FOR A VISUAL JOURNEY THROUGH TIME WITH THE 2026 COMMUNITY CALENDAR. FEATURING CAPTIVATING IMAGES FROM HISTORY GREAT SOUTHERN – KAARTDIJIN BIDDI ALBANY, THE CALENDAR BLENDS HISTORIC PHOTOGRAPHS WITH THEIR MODERN-DAY COUNTERPARTS TO REVEAL THE EVOLVING FACE OF ALBANY.

ABOUT HISTORY GREAT SOUTHERN – KAARTDIJIN BIDDI ALBANY

Established in the 1980s in the Albany Public Library, this archive has grown to become one of Western Australia's most respected local collections.

In 2024, it was renamed History Great Southern – Kaartdijin Biddi Albany to better reflect its cultural scope and connection to place. Kaartdijin Biddi, a Menang Noongar phrase meaning "pathway to knowledge," honours the enduring presence and wisdom of Albany's Menang Peoples.

Today, the team continues to gather, preserve, and share stories that span generations and help us understand who we are, where we have been, and where we are going.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Sincere thanks to Jenny Feast Photography for capturing the modern images, and to the dedicated team at History Great Southern – Kaartdijin Biddi Albany for their support, passion and stewardship of Albany's stories.

ALBANY 2026

In 2026, Albany will host Western Australia's first bicentenary, acknowledging the first place where Aboriginal and British people commenced living together on the western side of Australia.

At the heart of Albany 2026 is a story far older than two centuries. This is Menang Noongar Boodja; ancient country with deep cultural roots, where stories have been passed down for countless generations and continue to be shared today.

A year-long program of major cultural events focused on honest reflection, community celebration, and future focused aspirations will form the foundation of this milestone.

Binalup / Middleton Beach, circa 1912

A leisurely cruise was a favourite pastime during the warmer months. Here, passengers board the SS Silver Star at Binalup / Middleton Beach. Operated by local charter company Armstrong and Waters, the steam launch was a familiar sight on the inner harbour, Mammang Koort / King George Sound, and the Kalgan River, ferrying picnic parties and visitors to riverside tearooms.

Binalup, meaning First Light in the Menang Noongar language, is the dual name for Middleton Beach.

Rear of the Post Office, circa 1880

From 1867 to 1889, mail from the Albany Post Office to Perth was dispatched by coach, taking around three and a half days. From June 1889, a mail van with sorting facilities was added to the Great Southern Railway trains, reducing the delivery time to just 18 hours.

Albany Post Office staff, circa 1910

Like many regional centres across Australia, the Post Office was once the heart of town. Distances between towns were traditionally measured from the Post Office, and the postmaster held high community standing. In this photograph, Albany Postmaster Mr John Norman Sr wears a black armband to mourn the passing of former postmaster of 21 years, Mr G. H. Broomhall. Mr Norman managed the Telegraph Office prior to his appointment as Postmaster. In 2002, the University of Western Australia relocated its Albany campus to this building, giving it a new lease on life and showcasing the adaptive reuse of a heritage place.

Church choir with Archdeacon Louch, circa 1920

Consecrated in 1848, St John's Anglican Church was one of the earliest churches to be sanctified in Western Australia. Construction was a community effort, with materials and labour often provided voluntarily. Built from local granite, the church's walls are half a metre thick. A barrel organ was installed in a specially constructed gallery in 1852, and a tower with a bell was added in 1854.

Yakkan Toort / Dog Rock, circa 1880

Albany's granite outcrop Yakkan Toort / Dog Rock – meaning 'wild dog tamed' in the Menang Noongar language – holds deep cultural significance for the Menang people and is a beloved local landmark. In the 1920s, the Albany Town Council proposed blasting part of the rock to widen the road, prompting a public outcry and a referendum that saved it. In the 1930s, the RAC recommended painting a white collar for visibility at night. Despite later calls to relocate it, Yakkan Toort / Dog Rock was classified by the National Trust in 1973 and remains an enduring Albany landmark.

Albany Town Hall, circa 1900

Opened in 1888, Albany Town Hall has long been a cornerstone of civic and cultural life. This early 1900s scene – showing Mr F. R. Dymes' coach driven by coachman Mr Newton Thompson – reflects its role as a gathering place for important community occasions. From hosting silent movies and concerts to today's exhibitions and events, the Town Hall continues to be a vibrant venue at the heart of Albany's social and creative life.

From 1905, the Grand National Band Contest was a highlight of Albany Week, drawing bands from across Western Australia. Assembling at the Post Office on Stirling Terrace, the musicians marched in procession to the Ulster Road Recreation Ground, cheered by crowds along the way. This 1906 image shows the Perth City Band, which that year swept the major prizes – Championship, Quickstep, and Street Marching.

Lance Bombardier Stanley Spring, far left, served with the local militia's 124th Heavy Battery at Princess Royal Fortress. In May 1939, this 6-inch coastal gun was installed with a camouflaged steel shield and canvas covers to protect its instruments from the weather. The gun defended Albany throughout the Second World War. Stanley donated a large collection of photographs to History Great Southern – Kaartdijin Biddi Albany, as well as artefacts to the Princess Royal Fortress Military Museum.
